after the conventions When the celebration date was changed to July the convention plans were again changed and as first planned the convention will be held here.

It is expected that there will be a large number of delegates and the provision for the delegates who intend to stay over night is in charge of Mrs. Charles R. Cross of 70 Maple street. Several offerings will be taken during the meetings and the plan of having special contributions from the home churches or amounts voted by the various treasuries sent in charge of the various delegates will be in vogue that the money given may represent the churches and not the individuals. This is believed to be the fairer and more satisfactory way.

Cigar Factory Closes. After a prosperous business period of some eighteen years, Mrs. John Willey has decided to close up the Groton cigar factory on Thames street, Groton. Tuesday the old factory was cleaned out and the stock and tools removed. Raymond Warner has purchased the material and will probably carry on the manufacture of cigars at his home. The Willey name is well known throughout the country and during the time the clgars have been made in Monday to their home in New London.

Mr. and Mrs. Chrence Frazier returned on Monday to New Haven, Mrs. Frazier having spent ten days with relatives in Yantic and Norwich Town.

Ilme the cigars have been made in Groton there was always a great demand for the product. Since the death three years ago of Mr. Willey Mrs. Willey has carried on the business. Mrs. Willey owns the building, but does not, however, own the land, that being the property of Marquart Brothers.

Gigar Factory Closes. old tale which says that the skin of the snake that bites you, applied to the wound, will draw the poison. I got the snake that bit me out of his hox and killed and skinned him, put-ting the warm skin on the wound. All ting the warm skin on the wound. All this time I knew everything that was going on and when a chlcken was killed and the fresh, warm flesh put on the wound. I knew all about it. I felt no pain, but seemed like someone in a dreaw. When Dr. Campbell arrived he said that the giving me large quantities of whisky had been the means of keeping me alive until that time. He made an incision in my head (the snake bit Mr. Langevin in the back of the read, well down towards back of the read, well down towards the head of the dorsal column) towards the front of the skull and almost over the left temple. He made an injection of permanganate of potash and or-dered more whisky to be given. Heard Ecvery Word Said. "Other doctors had arrived by this time and while they thought I was unconscious I heard and recollected every word they said. I felt no pain from the cutting or from the treat-ment. The doctors said: If we can keep him alive for three days he may recover.' Later, in Backus hospital, I began to keep track of the days and when I found I was on earth at the end of the third day I was glad. They used me well in the hospital and said I was the best endurer of pain they ever had.

"My snakes knet me," said he, "and "My snakes knet me," said he, "and never made any fuss when I approached them or handled them. I have now a lot of them, but will not in the future handle them quite so freely. After I was bitten my head swelled up to a great size, but no swelling was noticed anywhere else. The doctors said the whisky counteracted the polson and that it was kept in the head. After going to hospital the same remedy was given me every five minutes until was given me every five minutes until signs of improvement were noticed." The snake which bit Mr. Langevin was one of the largest red snakes seen in this county. It measured over four feet.

Sueaking of capturing the red snakes, Langevin says they are really the easiest to capture and handle. They are not aggressive and if taken up in the proper manner will not attempt to strike. The fangs of the snake which bit him were at least an inch in length and quite a wound was torn in his head by them. Of interest to students of natural history is the statement made by him that as soon as the snake struck it dropped off. This the snake will always do if permitted, endeavoring to extricate its fangs from the wound.

Black Snakes Most Pugnacious. four feet.

Black Snakes Most Pugnacious. Mr. Langevin, in speaking of snakes generally, said he found the black snakes the most pugnacious of all. They would bite at the slightest provocation, but the bite was no more worthy of notice than the price of a brier. He showed several places on

In Mrs. O'Connor Taftville has lost one of its first settlers. When Ponemah Mill No. I was being erected in 1866 Mr. O'Connor, who died twenty-one years ago, was employed as an assistant. There were no houses, or practically none, in what is now the village and the workmen and their families lived in hastily erected cottages on the ledge opposite the place where No. 2 Mill now stands. Mr. O'Connor, as long as he lived, was day watchman of the old mill. Mrs. O'Connor has resided here for forty-three years and was respected and three years and was respected and honored by all who knew her. For the last few years she has been confined to her home, an invalid.
